RE: East Meets West!

A spectacular series of days of warm weather were the perfect backdrop for yet another milestone in the construction of SMRR. On January 23rd the temporary levy that was in place between the western most ski run and the two middle ski runs was removed. As of this writing, you are now able to travel freely from one section of the lake to another. What a great day at SMRR.

Even more importantly to some, El Nino continues to bless the area with a wonderfully wet winter season. With the ground nice and saturated, we are able to pick up additional run-off with each rain event that we have. Given the drought of record that we experienced for all of 2008 and most of 2009, a rainy winter season is something we very much need.

Still, even with the rain folks are skiing each week. At SMRR, year round skiing isn't just a possibility...it's a reality. As the days get longer and warmer, it's only going to get better. Come join us and be a part of one of the premier private ski lake developments in the country.

That's all from here for now.

See you on the water!
